A way to safely resume a form of sporting play

Americans are bored. We need sports. And athletes want to compete. Why no golf? A possible solution for team sports: Have all athletes, coaches and staff test for the coronavirus. For those who test negative, quarantine them for 14 days and then test them again. Two negative tests would result in eligibility to participate. Then, they would need to commit to living a low-virus-risk lifestyle, while being tested weekly. Some teams might lose stars and drop from favorite to underdog. So be it. The fans will need to be content to watch on TV. It would be better than what we have now.
